Overview

Priya S. (FICTIONAL DEMO DATA) worked towards: "Contribute one idea in a group setting, with a pre-assigned role, no more than 2 prompts". Session outcome: MET.

This report summarises what happened and what you can reinforce at home.

What we're working on

What we're working on | Evidence this session | Status

|---|---|---|

Contributing one idea in group work (assigned role) | Fact-checker role: 1 idea after one prompt, 1 freely at 11:38 | M

Using a private help channel instead of struggling silently | Asked a follow-up question in writing after the session | P

No status without evidence — if it says "Met", the evidence is in the middle column.

What went well

- Took the fact-checker role and used it — asked for the poster sources in writing
- Stayed in the group the whole activity with the assigned role
- Asked a follow-up question by email after class — the private channel worked

Home strategies

- Keep the same phrase at home: "Take a minute, then write it down."
- Sketching before talking about the day — drawing regulates
- Agree on a private signal for "I need a quiet moment"

Same words at home

Say the same phrase the class uses (private, written-response cue), so things stay consistent:

"Take a minute, then write it down."

What to watch for

- Going quiet and dropping eye contact during group activities
- Erasing or restarting written work repeatedly

If you see these, the script above and a quiet minute usually help.

Next session focus

Building on what worked this session — more practice with the same script and one new step.
